STUDENT MURDER SUSPECT

Lake Forest School Girl's Body Found in Woods Near Highland Park

ORPET IS HELD FOR CRIME

A subtle but violent poison taken internally, ended the life of Marlon Francis Lambert, 18-year-old Highland Park high school pupil, whose lifeless body was found by her father Thursday, Feb. 10, in a heavy wood on the country estate of Harold McCormick, just south of Lake Forest.

The girl, an acknowledged beauty, a senior in high schools, where she stood high in her classes, prominent in church work in Lake Forest and engaged to a student in the state university—with everything to live for—left the home of her father, Frank Lambert, head gardener on the "Indian Hill" estate of Jonas Kuppenheimer, to go to school. A chum was with her. She left the chum "to mail a letter." Twenty-four hours later she was found lifeless in the bleak woods.

Here are three outstanding facts in the case which make a theory of either murder or suicide plausible:

1. Although a violent poison was found in her organs and had ended her life, no container was found near her body. Crystals of the poison were found in her long tresses and beneath her finger nails.

2. The trail she took from the Chicago and Milwaukee electric railroad station at Sacred Heart convent indicates that a man was with her; that they walked fully a mile before her final resting place was reached; and that she left, evidently in haste. The police said she must have taken away the poison container.

3. The post mortem examination revealed that she had not been attacked and that she had been chaste.

Every since the finding of the dead body the state's attorney, police and other officials have been working diligently to fasten the guilt upon Wm. H. Orpet, who according to his own statement was the companion of the girl, in her walk about the woods on the fatal day.

Although Orpet has made some damaging admissions, he stoutly clings to his statement of not guilty and claims he will have no difficulty in proving his innocence when the time comes.

He states he met her in the woods near Sacred Heart academy Wednesday morning by appointment, after writing her a letter.

He said she pleaded for two hours with him to renew a friendship with her. Then, he said, he left her and as he did she swallowed the prussic acid which caused her death.

Detectives Toby and Baardeley and State's Attorney Duffy profess to believe that he has not told the whole truth. He does not yet admit he actually saw the girl die. He has not explained where the poison came from.

NEWS WILL BE NEUTRAL ON LOCAL OPTION MATTER

Now that the wet and dry fight is fully launched, the News takes this opportunity to explain its stand. As a paper we stand neutral. On our own initiative we will make no mention whatever of either side of the issue. No notices of meetings, etc., will appear in these columns unless submitted in writing to us and signed by the parties so wishing. Its appearance, then, they will be classed as advertising, so marked, and charged for as such. Either side may purchase space in our paper at the rate of 15 cents per inch for display advertising, 25 cents per reader of 5 lines or less and 10 cents per line for all exceeding that amount. We have the space to sell, and no discrimination will be made, each side will receive the same show, the same price will prevail to all. We, however, do reserve the right to reject any article if it be of a misleading or libelous nature, no matter from which faction it is submitted.

This is a stand that has been taken by a majority of the newspaper men of the county, and we believe it to be the only fair and honorable one.

Obituary

Chas. Darby was born at Middlezey, Somersetshire, England, Sept. 12, 1829. He was the youngest of a family of six. He was married to Elizabeth Atyeo at Ellington in 1853 and to them was born 4 children, Dr. H. C. Darby, Wilmet, Wis., Mrs. Mary Adams and W. J. Darby of this village and Mrs. J. M. Isabaster who died 14 years ago. In 1868 he came to America and settled in the town of Avon and in 1874 he moved with his family to Antioch township near Loon Lake. In 1878 he purchased the farm near Lake Villa which was his home for nearly 30 years. When in 1907 removed to this village and 5 years ago he lost his life partner after a wedded life of more than 50 years. During the evangelistic spirit of 1878 he with his wife was converted to Christ at the old Centennial church under Evangelist A. J. Bell, united with the Methodist Episcopal church and for a good many years attended its services until the infirmities of age compelled him to be a shut in but he loved to sing the songs of Zion and it was a consolation to him to have anyone speak of the power of Christ to save. His last sickness was of short duration, having an attack of lagrip, he lingered for a few days and on Saturday, Feb. 5, at 4 p. m., he peacefully passed away to his eternal reward.

Would Mean Much to Country.
The best authorities agree that the total of the crops raised from seed in the United States might be doubled by improved methods of farming. To do this would add $4,000,000,000 to the nation's wealth and the resources of its farm population.

MENINGITIS CAUSES DEATH OF CHILD

Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. King have been called upon to part with their second oldest child, little Gale, aged two years nine months, who was taken from them by death on Saturday last. The funeral was held at the King home in this village Tuesday afternoon with burial in the Hillside Cemetery. The child was ill for only a short time, she went to Sunday school Sunday, Jan. 30, was ill that evening, Monday and Tuesday was up around the house part of the time.

On Wednesday, Dr. C. E. King of Chicago who has always treated Mr. King's children was called on the long distance telephone and prescribed treatment for what was apparently bowel trouble or toxemia.

Thursday Dr. Warriner was called in and continued practically the same treatment until Sunday night when she was removed to Lakeside hospital Chicago, by Dr. King, and the case given to child specialist Dr. Robert A. Black, who, after carefully watching her symptoms for two days, and stating that the early symptoms were almost identical with those of toxemia, diagnosed the case as meningitis or inflammation of the brain. Death came at 6 p. m., Saturday, Feb. 12.

Dr. Black states that her sickness and death were a direct result of the grippe which she had in December and from which she had never fully recovered. Previous to that time she had always been robust and enjoyed perfect health.

ALLENDALE SCHOOL MAY BECOME HOME OF DEPENDENT BOYS

If the Lake county board of supervisors are successful in their efforts to make arrangements with the heads of the Allendale school for boys at Lake Villa to send dependent children there instead of to several different institutions in the state it is felt that the plan will work out much more harmoniously than it does.

Members of the board of supervisors paid a visit to the Allendale school last Friday and took the matter up in detail. It is known that the training given the youngsters at this school is unexcelled. This training is something the dependent boys sent out from the county court do not get at other state institutions.

Supervisor Conrad of Waukegan and Supervisor Goss of North Chicago are especially interested in the proposition for it is a known fact that big number of the dependent children disposed of in county court come from Waukegan and North Chicago. Occasionally there is a dependent child from some other locality, but this is an exception.

As a rule, the Allendale school is full to overflowing and it might not be possible to make arrangements to have the dependent boys taken there unless some addition to the school could be built. It is possible, however, that the attendance there now is such that additional boys could be accommodated.

At the present time some of the dependent boys are being sent to the Lake Bluff orphanage, some are sent to the Glenwood school for boys and some are sent to other institutions. All agree there are great possibilities in the Allendale school if the proper arrangements can be made.

DENY WOMEN A BALLOT AT PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARY

Women voters are barred from participating in the presidential preference primary April 11, by a supreme court decision handed down orally at Springfield. More than 250,000 women in Cook county will be denied the vote also in the election of ward, precinct and state committeemen and delegates to the national convention. They still have the right, however, to vote for presidential electors in November.

Although the supreme court did not pass on the constitutionality of the act giving the women the right to vote for all except constitutional offices, the opinion does say that the legislature had the right to provide for participation by women in the presidential primaries, but that it failed to incorporate that provision in the act. This was taken by suffrage leaders of Chicago as an indication that the supreme court believes the legislature did not err in passing the limited suffrage act.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for collector for the town of Lake Villa, subject to the will of the majority of the voters of said town.

CLIPPINGS OF INFORMATION

One hundred farmers from Benson county, North Dakota, visited Waukegan county last week while on a trip through Wisconsin buying cattle.

The Bank of Burlington has started a novel plan to give the people of Burlington and vicinity money with which to do their Christmas shopping. It is known as the Landis Christmas Savings Club.

On account of the big boom now enjoyed at both of the typewriter factories at Woodstock, that city is sadly in need of more houses. Scores of new families would move there provided houses were obtainable.

Twenty-seven business men and farmers residing in and around Hebron have assured that village of the very best chautauqua it has ever had by allowing their names to go onto the guarantee list, which means that it is up to these men to sell $700 worth of tickets. Quite an undertaking.

Miss Sophie Epping, of Ingleside, was the victim of a miscellaneous shower at the home of Joe. Smitz at Slade's Corners Monday evening, Miss Epping is soon to be the bride of Ben Smitz.

The downtown district of Janesville has been made poleless. All telephone and power poles were declared a menace by the city commission and ordered removed from the streets. In place of poles the city will erect a modern ornamental lighting system of the single unit type. The "White Way" will cost about $5,000.

The first company to be incorporated under the laws of the state of Illinois for the express purpose of growing and selling mushrooms was formed by Lake county men, all of whom are Highland Park residents. A certificate of incorporation has been granted to the Exmor Mushroom Company of Highland Park and the stock of the newly organized company is $40,000 all of which, it is said, has been paid in.

A law suit at Estherville, Iowa, recently, says an exchange, determined a question that has been conspicuous for years—that of by-bidding at public sales. A man bought a team of ponies and after the sale he discovered that several fellows had been given a quiet tip to do the by-bidding stunt, so that the team was knocked down to him at a much higher price than it had been offered him at private sale. The purchaser refused to pay the price and was sued for the amount. When the case came to trial, the judge took the case from the jury and gave the verdict to the defendant. This action on the part of the judge has set a precedent in giving the correct status to a bidder at public sales.

LET PEOPLE KNOW WHAT YOU HAVE FOR SALE

A farmer, who was carrying an express package from a city mail order house, was accosted by a local merchant: "Why didn't you buy that bill of goods from me? I could have saved you the express, besides you would have been patronizing a home store, which helps pay taxes and build up this locality. With characteristic frankness, the farmer said: "Why don't you patronize your home paper and advertise? I read it and didn't know you had the goods I have here, nor do I see your name in the paper inviting one to come to your store."

It is true that most times farmers, as well as town people, do not know they can purchase cheaper at home than in the cities. An advertisement in these columns will assist the trade at home movement as well as bring new customers.

THE BALL OF FIRE

BY GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER and LILLIAN CHESTER

ILLUSTRATED BY C. D. RHODES

Towards morning there was an army of newspaper men so worried and distressed, and generally consumed with the mad passion of restraint, that there was scarcely a finger left in the profession, and frightened-eyed copy boys hid behind doors. Suddenly a dozen telegraph operators, in as many offices, jumped from their desks, as if they had been touched at the same instant by a powerful current from their instruments and shouted varying phrases, a composite of which would be nearest expressed by: "Let 'er go!"

It had been eight o'clock in the evening in New York when Gerald Fosland had first given out his information, and at that moment it was 1 a. m. in Berlin. At 3 a. m. in Berlin time, which was 10 p. m. in New York, the Baron von Slachten, who had been detained by an unusual stress of diplomatic business strolled to his favorite cafe. At 3:05 the Baron von Slachten became the most thought about man in his city, but the metropolitan press of Berlin is slightly fettered and more or less curbed, and there are certain formalities to be observed. It is probable, therefore, that the Baron might have gone about his peaceful way for two or three days, had not a fool American, in the advertising branch of one of the New York papers, in an entire ignorance of decent formalities, walked straight out under den Linden, to Baron von Slachten's favorite cafe, and, picking out the Baron at a table with four bushy-faced friends, made this cheerful remark, in the manner and custom of journalists in his native land:

"Well, Baron, the International Transportation company has confessed. Could you give me a few words on the subject?"

The Baron, who had been about to drink a stein of beer, set down his half-liter and stared at the young man blankly. His face turned slowly yellow, and he rose.

"Lass bleichen," the Baron ordered the handy persons who were about to remove the cheerful advertising representative, and incense him for life, and then the Baron walked stolidly out of the cafe, and rode home, and wrote for an hour or so, and ate a heavy early breakfast, and returned to his study, and obligingly shot himself.

This was at seven a. m. in New York, which was two a. m. in New York; and owing to the nervousness of an old woman servant, the news reached New York at three a. m., and the big wheels began to go around.

Where was Edward E. Allison? There was nothing the free and entirely uncurbed wanted to know so much as that; but the f. and e. u. was doomed to disappointment in that one desire of its heart. Even as he had stumbled down the steps of the Sargent house, Allison was aware of the hideous thing he had done; aware, too, that Jim Sargent was as violent as good-natured men are apt to be. This thought, it must be said in justice to Allison, came last and went away first. It was from himself that he tried to run away, when he shot his runaway up through the park and into the north country, and, by devious roads, to a place which had come to him as if by inspiration; the Willow club, which was only open in the summer time, and employed a feeble old caretaker in the winter. To this haven, bleak and cold as his own numbed soul, Allison drove in mechanical firmness, and walked around to the kitchen, where he found old Peabody smoking a corncob pipe, and laboriously mending a pair of breeches.

Allison went into the office and closed the door after him. It was damp and chilly in there, but he did not notice it. He sat down in the swivel chair behind the flat top desk and rested his chin in his hands, and stared out of the window at the bleak and dreary landscape. Just within his range of vision was a lonely little creek, shadowed by a mournful drooping willow which had given the club its name, and in the wintry breeze it waved its long tendrils against the linden gray sky. Allison fixed his eyes on that oddly beckoning tree and strove to think. Old Peabody came pottering in, and with many a clang and clatter bulled a fire in the capacious Dutch stove, with a longing glance at Allison, for he was starved with the hunger of talk, he went out again.

At dusk he once more opened the door. Allison had not moved. He still sat with his chin in his hands, looking out at that wearily waving willow. Old Peabody thought that he must be asleep, until he tipped up at the side. Allison's gray eyes, unblinking, were staring straight ahead, with no expression in them. It was as if they had turned to glass.

"Excuse me, Mr. Allison. Chicken or steak? I got 'em both, one for supper and one for breakfast."

Allison turned slowly, part way towards Peabody, not entirely.

"Chicken or steak?" repeated Peabody.

"Oh? Yes. Oh, yes. Yes. The chicken."

The fire had gone out. Peabody rebuilt it. He came in an hour later, and studied the silent man at the desk for a long minute, and then he decided an important question for himself. He brought in Allison's dinner on a tray and set it on a corner of the desk.

At eleven Peabody came in again, to see if Allison were not ready to go to bed; but Allison sent him away as soon as he had fixed the fire. The tray was untouched, and out there in the dim moonlight, which peered now and then through the shifting clouds, the long-armed willow beckoned and beckoned.

Morning came, cold and gray, and damp as the night had been. Allison had fallen asleep towards the dawn, sitting at his desk with his heavy head on his arms, and not even the clatter of the building of the fire roused him. At seven when Peabody came, Allison rose up with a start at the opening of the door, but before he glanced at Peabody, he looked out of the window at the willow.

"Good-morning," said Peabody, with a cheerfulness which sounded oddly in that dim, bare room. "I brought you the paper, and some fresh eggs. There was a little touch of frost this morning, but it went away about time for sun-up. How will you have your eggs? Fried, I suppose, after the steak. Seems like you don't have much appetite," and he scrutinized the untouched tray with mingled regret and resentment. Since Allison paid no attention to him, he decided on eggs fried after the steak, and started for the door.

Allison had picked up the paper mechanically. It had lain with the top part downwards, but his own picture was in the center. He turned the paper over, so that he could see the headlines.

"Peabody!" No longer the dead tones of a man in a mental stupor, a man who cannot think, but in the sharp tones of a man who can feel.

"Yes, sir." Sharp and crisp, like the snap of a whip. Allison had scared it out of him.

"Don't come in again until I call you."

"Yes, sir." Grieved this time. Darn it, wasn't he doing his best for the man!

So it had come; the time when his will was not God! A god should be omnipotent, impregnable, unassailable, absolute. He was surprised at the calmness with which he took this blow. It was the very bluntness of the hurt which left it so little painful. A man with his leg shot off suffers not one-tenth so much as a man who tears his fingernail to the quick. Moreover, there was that other big horror which had left him stupefied and numb. He had not known that in his ruthlessness there was any place for remorse, or for terror of himself at anything he might choose to do. But there was. He entered into no ravings now, no whirlings, no outcries. He realized calmly and clearly all he had done, and all which had happened to him in retribution. He saw the downfall of his stupendous scheme of worldwide conquest. He saw his fortune, to the last penny, swept away, for he had invested all that he could raise on his securities and his business and his prospects, in the preliminary expenses of the International Transportation company, bearing this portion of the financial burden himself, as part of the plan by which he meant to obtain ultimate control and command of the tremendous consoling nation, and become the king among kings, with the whole world in his imperious grasp, a sway larger than that of any potentate who had ever sat upon a throne, larger than the sway of all the monarchs of earth put together, as large terrestrially as the sway of God himself! All these he saw crumbled away, fallen down around him, a wreck so complete that no shred or splinter of it was worth the picking up; saw himself disgraced and discredited, hated and ridiculed throughout the length and breadth and circumference of the very earth he had meant to rule; saw himself discarded by the strong men whom he had inveigled into this futile scheme and saw himself forced into commercial death as wolves rend and devour a crippled member of their pack; last, he saw himself loathed by the one pure breast he had sought to make his own; and that was the deepest hurt of all; for now, in the bright blaze of his own confessions, he saw that, beneath his grossness, he had loved her, after all, loved her with a love which, if he had shown it of its dress, might perhaps have won her.

Through all that day he sat at the desk, and when the night time came again, he walked out of the house, and across the field, and over the tiny footbridge, under the willow tree with the still beckoning arms; and the world, his world, the world he had meant to make his own, never saw him again.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

A Matter of Conscience.

Gall stood at the rail of the White-capt, gazing out over the dancing blue waves with troubled eyes.

"Penny for your thoughts." The immensely handsome Dick Rodley had strolled up, in his blue jacket and white trousers and other nautical embellishments.

"The news in the paper," she told him. "It's so big."

Dick looked down at her critically. She was so new a Gall to him that he was puzzled, and worried, too, for he felt, rather than saw, that some trouble possessed this dearest of his friends.

"Yes, it is big news," he admitted; "big enough and startling enough to impress anyone very gravely." Then he shook his head at her. "But you mustn't worry about it, Gall. You're not responsible."

Gall turned her eyes from him and looked out over the white-edged waves again.

"It is a tremendous responsibility," she mused, when Dick, as became him, violently broke the thread of thought by taking her arm and drawing her away from the rail, and walking gayly with her up to the forward shelter deck, where, shielded from the eddies of the wind, there sat, around the big table and amid a tangle of Sunday papers, Jim Sargent and Rev. Smith Boyd, Arly and Gerald Fosland, all four deep in the discussion of the one possible topic of conversation.

"Allison's explosion again," objected Dick, as Gall and he joined the group, and caught the general tenor of the thought. "I suppose the only way to escape that is to jump off the White-capt. Gall's worse than any of you. I find she's responsible for the whole thing."

Arly and Gerald looked up quickly.

"I neither said nor intimated anything of the sort," Gall retorted, and she sat down by Arly, whereupon Dick, observing that he was much offended, patted Gall on the shoulder, and disappeared in search of Ted.

"I'd like to hand a vote of thanks to the responsible party," laughed Jim Sargent, to whom the news meant more than Gall appreciated. "With Allison broke, Urbank of the Midcoast succeeds to control of the A. P., and Urbank is anxious to incorporate the Towanda Valley in the system. He told me so yesterday."

The light which leaped into Gall's eyes, and the trace of color which flashed into her cheeks, were most comforting to Arly; and they exchanged a smile of great satisfaction. They clatched hands ecstatically under the corner of the table, and wanted to laugh outright. However, it would keep.

The destruction of Mr. Allison was a feat of which any gentleman's conscience might approve," commented Gerald Fosland, who had spent some time in definitely settling with himself the ethics of that question. "The company he proposed to form was a menace to the liberty of the world and the progress of civilization."

The destruction didn't go far enough," snapped Jim Sargent. "Clark, Vance, Haverman, Grandin, Babbitt, Taylor, Chisholm; those fellows won't be touched, and they built up their monopolies by the same method Allison proposed; trickery, force and plain theft!"

"Harsh language, Uncle Jim Sargent, to use toward your respectable fellow-vestrymen," chided Arly, her black eyes dancing.

"Clark and Chisholm?" and Jim Sargent's brows knotted. "They're not my fellow-vestrymen. Either they go or I do!"

"I would like you to remain," quietly stated Rev. Smith Boyd. "I hope to achieve several important alterations in the ethics of Market Square church." He was grave this morning. He had unknowingly been ripening for some time on many questions; and the revelations in this morning's paper had brought him to the point of decision. "I wish to drive the money changers out of the temple," he added, and glanced at Gall with a smile in which there was acknowledgment.

"A remarkably lucrative enterprise, eh, Gall?" laughed her Uncle Jim, remembering her criticism on the occasion of her first and only vestry meeting, when she had called their attention to the satire of the stained-glass window.

"You will have still the scribes and Pharisees, doctor; those who stand praying in the public places, so they may be seen of all men," and Gall smiled across at him, within her eyes the mischievous twinkle which had been absent for many days.

"I hope to be able to remove the public place," replied the rector, with gravity which told of something vital beneath the apparent repartee. Mrs. Boyd, strolling past with Aunt Grace Sargent, paused to look at him fondly. "I shall set myself, with such strength as I may have, against the building of the proposed cathedral."

"Don't be foolish, Boyd," protested Sargent, who had always felt a fatherly responsibility for the young rector. "It's a big ambition and a worthy ambition, to build that cathedral, and because you're offended with certain things the papers have said, about Clark and Chisholm in connection with the church, is no reason you should cut off your nose to spite your face."

"It is not the publication of these things which has determined me," returned the rector thoughtfully. "It has merely hastened my decision. To begin with, I acknowledge now that it was only a vague, artistic dream of mine that such a cathedral, by its very magnificence, would promote worship. That might have been the case when cathedrals were the only magnificent buildings erected, and when every rich and glittering thing was devoted to religion. A golden candlestick then became connected entirely with the service of the Almighty. Now, however, magnificence has no such significance. The splendor of a cathedral must enter into competition with the splendor of a statehouse, a museum or a hotel."

"You shouldn't switch that way, Boyd," remonstrated Sargent, showing his keen disappointment. "When you began to agitate for the cathedral you brought a lot of our members in who hadn't attended services in years. You stirred them up. You got them interested. They'll drop right off."

"I hope not," returned the rector earnestly. "I hope to reach them with a higher ambition, a higher pride, a higher vanity. If you like to put it that way, I wish them to take joy in establishing the most magnificent conditions for the poor which have ever been built. We have no right to the money which is to be paid us for the Voder court property. We have no right to spend it in pomp. It belongs to the poor from whom we have taken it, and to the city which has made us rich by enhancing the value of our ground. I propose to build permanent and sanitary tenements, to house as many poor people as possible, and conduct them without a penny of profit above the cost of repairs and maintenance."

Gall bent upon him beaming eyes, and the delicate flush, which had begun to return to her cheeks, deepened. Was this the sort of tenements he had proposed to re-erect in Voder court? Perhaps she had been hasty! Rev. Smith Boyd in turning slowly from one to the other of the little group, by way of establishing mental communication with them, rested for a moment in the beaming eyes of Gall, and smiled at her in affectionate recognition, then swept his glance on to his mother, where it lingered.

"You are perfectly correct," stated Gerald Fosland, who, though sitting stiffly upright, had managed nevertheless to dispose one elbow where it touched gently the surface of Arly. "Market Square church is a much more dignified old place of worship than the ostentatious cathedral would ever be, and your project for spending the money has such strict justice at the bottom of it that it must prevail. But, I say, Doctor Boyd, and he gave his mustache a contemplative tug; "don't you think you should include a small margin of profit for the future extension of your idea?"

"That's glorious, Gerald!" approved Gall; and Arly, laughing, patted his hand.

"You're probably right," considered the rector, studying Fosland with a new interest. "I think we'll have to put you on the vestry."

"I'd be delighted, I'm sure," responded Gerald, in the courteous tone of one accepting an invitation to dinner.

"Do you hear what your son's planning to do?" called Jim Sargent to Mrs. Boyd. He was not quite reconciled. "He proposes to take that wonderful new rectory away from you."

The beautiful Mrs. Boyd merely dimpled.

"I am a trifle astonished," she confessed. "My son has been so extremely eager about it; but if he is relinquishing the dream, it is because he wants something else very much more worth while. I entirely approve of his plan for the new tenements," and she did not understand why they all laughed at her. She did feel, however, that there was affection in the laughter; and she was quite content. Laughing with them, she walked on with Grace Sargent.

Gerald Fosland drew forward his chair.

"Do you know," he observed, "I should like very much to become a member of your vestry."

"I'm glad you are interested," returned the rector, and producing a pencil he drew a white advertising space towards him. "This is the plan of tenement I have in mind, and for the next half-hour the five of them discussed tenement plans with great enthusiasm."

At the expiration of that time, Ted and Lucile and Dick and Marlon came romping up, with the deliberate intention of creating a disturbance; and Gall and Rev. Smith Boyd, being thrown accidentally to the edge of that whirlpool, walked away for a rest.

"They tell me you're going abroad," observed the rector, looking down at her sadly, as they passed at her favorite rail space.

"Yes," she answered, quietly. "Father and mother are coming up next week," and she glanced up at the rector from under her curving lashes. There was a short space of silence. It was almost as if these two were warring.

"We shall miss you very much," he told her, in all sincerity. They were both looking out over the blue waves; he, tall, broad-shouldered, agile of limb; she, straight, lithe, graceful. Mrs. Boyd and Mrs. Sargent passed them admiringly, but went on by with a trace of sadness.

"I'm sorry to leave," Gall replied. "I shall be very anxious to know how you are coming on with your new plan. I'm proud of you for it."

"Thank you," he returned.

They were talking mechanically. In them was an inexpressible sadness. They had come so near, and yet they were so far apart. There was no chance of change. It was a matter of conscience which came between them, and it was a divergence which would widen with the years. And yet they loved. They mutually knew it, and it was because of that love that they must stay apart.

CHAPTER XXIX.

A Vestry Meeting.

There was a strained atmosphere in the vestry meeting from the first. Every member present felt the tension from the moment old Joseph G. Clark walked in with Chisholm. They did not even nod to Rev. Smith Boyd, but took their seats stolidly in their customary places at the table, Clark, shielding his eyes, as was his wont, against the light which streamed on him from the red robe of the Good Shepherd. The repression was apparent, too, in Rev. Smith Boyd, who rose to address his vestrymen as soon as the late-comers arrived.

"Gentlemen," said he, "I wish to speak to you as the treasury committee, rather than as vestrymen, for it is in the former capacity which you always attend. I am advised that you have been paid for Voder court."

Chisholm, to whom he directed a gaze of inquiry, nodded his head.

"It is in the Majestic," he stated. "I have plans for its investment, which I wish to lay before the committee."

"I shall lay my own before them at the same time," went on the rector. "I wish, however, to preface those plans by the statement that I have, so far as I am concerned, relinquished all thought of building the new cathedral."

Nicholas Van Ploon, who had been much troubled of late, brightened and nodded his round head emphatically.

"That's what I say," he declared. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

GRADES IN MEXICAN ARMY

American Woman Learned Something From Visit Paid Her by a Detachment of Villistas.

Some years ago a humorous story went the rounds of the newspapers, about a young lady who, at a gathering of the Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution, held her head exceedingly high, explaining her haughty demeanor on the ground that she was descended from a bona fide private soldier—the only private, she was convinced, in the Revolutionary host. The following incident would seem to indicate that the Mexicans who are fighting today are almost as "well offered" as the patriot army of the young lady's lively fancy.

An American woman—now safe in the states—writes that five soldados of the Villistas following one day rode in to her remote mountain camp. They were very decent fellows, and made no threats; still, in the absence of her husband, it seemed only wise to give them plenty of food and drink, also to yield gracefully to the request of one of the number, who said he was the captain, for the "loan" of a blanket.

Pretty soon a second warrior intimated that he, too, could use a blanket to advantage in his campaigning, adding that he, too, was captain. When a third made the same request, also announcing his rank as that of captain, their hostess paused in her distribution of blankets.

"Tell me," she inquired politely, "is this entire detachment composed of captains?"

"Oh, no, senora!" replied the one who had first spoken. "I am Captain Primero, this is Captain Segundo, and this is Captain Tercero. Those"—indicating the two remaining—"are the private soldiers."

And at this the admiring senora, according to her own account, at once gave a blanket to each of the two "high privates" in the rear rank—moved by "sympathy with them for being captained firstly, secondly, and even thirdly, and also by admiration of them as being such rare birds!" Hair Demand Exceeds Supply.

During the last few years the exportation of human hair from Japan has increased to the point that the demand for it now far exceeds the available supply. Especially when compared with that of the average European, the hair of the Japanese woman is extremely long, elastic, and strong, which gives it superiority for commercial purposes.

The United States and France offer the principal markets for the Oriental dealers. In Europe it is much used for weaving purposes, the hair being bleached by chemical treatment, dyed in different colors, and subsequently woven with silk into ribbon materials and heavy fabrics suitable for draperies and upholstery, some of which command prices of several hundred pounds a yard.

Not a Bite of Breakfast Until You Drink Water

Says a glass of hot water and phosphate prevents illness and keeps us fit.

Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of combustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not completely eliminated from the system each day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infect the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste, toxins and ptomaine-like poisons are formed and sucked into the blood.

Men and women who can't get feeling right must begin to take inside baths. Before eating breakfast each morning drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash out of the thirty feet of bowels the previous day's accumulation of poisons and toxins and to keep the entire alimentary canal clean, pure and fresh.

Those who are subject to sick headache, colds, biliousness, constipation, others who wake up with bad taste, foul breath, backache, rheumatic stiffness, or have a sour, gassy stomach after meals, are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from any druggist or storekeeper, and begin practicing internal sanitation. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on the subject.

Remember inside bathing is more important than outside bathing, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing poor health, while the bowel pores do. Just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.—Adv.

Punished.

"What is that horrible looking effigy they've got stuck up in the middle of the public square?" asked the city man of the landlord of the Punkville Arms.

"That sir," replied the landlord, "is the statue of Silas W. Punk, the man who founded Punkville."

"Founded Punkville, eh? Well, if that's the case, he richly deserved what the artist did to him!"

A GRATEFUL OLD LADY.

Mrs. A. G. Clemens, West Alexandria, Pa., writes: I have used Dodd's Kidney Pills; also Diamond Dinner Pills. Before using them I had suffered for a number of years with backache, also tender spots on spine, and had at times black floating specks before my eyes. I also had lumbago and heart trouble. Since using this medicine I have been relieved of my suffering. It is agreeable to me for you to publish this letter. I am glad to have an opportunity to say to all who are suffering as I have done that I obtained relief by using Dodd's Kidney Pills and Diamond Dinner Pills.

IS CHILD CROSS, FEVERISH, SICK

Look, Mother! If tongue is coated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely. A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is they become highly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sears, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhoea. Later, Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs," because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv.

WHAT'S HAPPENING

Gotham Newsies Hear President Wilson by Phone

NEW YORK—Imagine a room full of newsboys with ears pressed to telephone receivers and eyes just jumping with delight, listening to no less a personage than the president of the United States, as he told them how much he liked them. That's just what happened at the Boys' club at Avenue A and Tenth street one night a little while ago. As soon as connections were established with the White House, 60 boys with frostbitten noses leaped to the receivers, heard half of the president's message, and then made way for 60 more youngsters, who received the rest of Mr. Wilson's remarks.

No presidential message was ever listened to with greater attention and no presidential message was ever received with more clamorous enthusiasm. The boys, most of them ranging from eight to ten years of age, stamped their feet and burst into such a frenzy of joy that even President Wilson, in the White House, heard the demonstration and inquired from Robert Stewart Scarsburgh, one of the officials on this end of the wire, what it was all about. Mr. Scarsburgh told him the newsboys were merely expressing their thanks for the message they had received and the president responded with a hearty laugh and a cheerful "good night."

Sixty receivers installed by the courtesy of the New York Telephone company served to put the newsboys on speaking terms with the executive of the United States.

"My, ain't it great," one of them gasped as he heard the president's words.
"Harry up, lomme get at it, will yer," exclaimed another boy, clutching at the receiver.
"Aw, wait a minute!" was the whispered reply. "He ain't through yet."
"Aw, come on, give me a chance," urged the anxious youngster.
And so it went on all along the line until the president had finished speaking.

This Chicago "Fish" Turned Out to Be a Shark

CHICAGO—It was a fine, dry Sunday and West Madison street was alive with boys who buzzed about the closed entrances of saloons like so many drones. At Madison and Desplaines streets lounged "Molar" Lynch and "Spiko" Carroll, the former manhandling his nails with a battered fetch and the latter discoursing on the depression in the "jack-rolling" industry produced by the Sunday closing order.

"Spiko" paused in the midst of one of his most convincing arguments, with hand uplifted, as down the street in a zigzag course staggered a large man, puffing stertorously and mumbling to himself. The man veered toward the building line, lunged unsteadily toward the gutter, swung for a moment to a light pole, and sprawled into the street.

"Fish!" exclaimed "Spiko."
"Molar" flung away his manhandling set and the two shuffled toward the gutter. They lifted the stranger to his feet, recovered his hat, set it upon his disheveled hair, and brushed his clothes. Then they backed him up against a wall. The stranger closed his eyes and began to snore. "Spiko" winked at "Molar," and the two began a hasty search of his pockets. In one they found 89 cents. In another two bullets.

"Must have a gun," whispered "Spiko."
"Yes, and one that's in fine working order," snapped the stranger, becoming suddenly awake and whipping out a revolver. "Now, I'm going to put both of you to bed in the Desplaines street station."
So Detective Sergeant James Hosna called his partner, Sgt. Joseph Roman, and led the two to the station, where they were hooked as John Lynch and John Carroll. The latter is said to be an ex-convict.

"We thought they were jack rollers and they hit like a couple of suckers," Hosna told the desk sergeant.

Army of Bats Fighting San Antonio's Mosquitoes

SAN ANTONIO, TEX.—An army of mosquito-eating bats, several thousand strong, has been turned loose in San Antonio. If, as has been predicted for it, the army succeeds in crippling seriously the activities of the germ-laden mosquito population, many other cities may follow San Antonio's example and establish their "municipal bat roosts."

Dr. C. A. R. Campbell, who has made a special study of bats, is responsible for San Antonio's bat roost. The institution came into existence last spring.

It was not a success in its first year owing to the fact that it was established late in the spring, and its population was not numerous enough. This spring there is a large army of bats on hand and it has been given an early start.

Doctor Campbell says that one bat in the course of a single day will eat 1,000 mosquitoes. He expects hordes of mosquitoes to perish daily, and that by the end of the summer this pestiferous insects will be almost, if not entirely, missing from this locality.

Doctor Campbell says that the more malarial, typhoid and other germs a mosquito carries, the better the bat relishes it. After April 30 the bats grow less hungry and more sleepy. By the end of July their flight totals only about two hours. Soon thereafter the season for baby bats arrives.

A neighboring city having written to Doctor Campbell asking him to get rid of mosquitoes, he replied: "Breed bats." Then he got another letter inquiring, "But when you've got rid of the mosquitoes, how do you get rid of the bats?"

Savannah Cobbler Makes Shoes for Hunting Dogs

SAVANNAH.—South Carolina has been accused of many things, but here is a new one. The going is so hard that it has become necessary to have the dogs used in hunting wear shoes. The common yellow dog may have his day, but just now it is the fine animal with the pedigree which is breaking into the new fashion.

F. C. Cier, a veteran Savannah shoemaker, was commissioned by David Woostencroft, manager of the Goodhope camp, to make a complete set of shoes for ten dogs, and he has completed the order. The shoes cost $40. The purchaser explained that the shoes were needed for bird dogs and others used in deer and fox hunting, in order to protect their feet from the misery of the cockspur or sandspur. The soles of the dog shoes are circular and a trifle larger than a silver dollar. They are made of wolf leather. The tops, which are laced around the dogs' legs, are of vic kid. The foot is forced into the shoe top, which resembles in a general way the leg of a small sock, and the lacing, which are exactly the same in type as those used in man's footwear, are then drawn tightly and tied.

WOMAN WITH BROOM ROUTS THE ROBBERS

Rescues Husband by Beating His Assailants Over Head and Poking Them in Ribs.

New York—Mrs. Anthony Canono, wife of a well-to-do real estate owner of the Bronx, heard a noise outside the door of her apartment at 281 East 136th street last evening. She took her attention from the dinner she was making ready long enough to look out in the hall and there spied three men making a combined attack upon her husband, who was setting much the worst of it.

Mrs. Canono had none of the weapons recognized in modern warfare at hand, but she had a new stiff broom, and it took only an instant for her to grab that up and get out into the hall.

The fight did not last long. A few minutes later three men were falling over themselves trying to get through the doorway at the same time. They had been jabbed in the face with the straw, punched in the back and front with the handle and smashed over the head so fast they couldn't fight back.

Mr. Canono suffered the loss of two teeth. A little later he identified a man standing on a nearby corner as one of his assailants. This man, who was arrested, vehemently denied the charge, but he was locked up.

The detectives said that the trio, thinking the real estate man, who owns several buildings, might have money on his person, had tried to hold him up outside his door.

THOUGHT MURDER WAS MOVIE

Officer Sat on Motorcycle as Real Estate Man Killed Banker in California Town.

Tropico, Cal.—A quarrel over the placing of a tombstone shop on a residence street of this place resulted in the murder of D. W. Richardson, millionaire vice-president of the First National bank of Tropico, by Thomas Mizer, a real estate man.

The banker was walking down one of the village streets when Mizer approached, revolved a gun and, without a word, shot and killed him. Deputy City Marshal Fairfield sat on his motorcycle a short distance away and watched the murder, under the impression that a moving picture was being staged.

Boston.—After Mrs. Dudley L. Page, wife of the candy manufacturer, had lunched with friends at the Hotel Lenox the other afternoon, she placed a $1,000 bill for a tip on the silver tray. Most waiters are stoics and this one never even coughed. Clerk Morse, however, sent the bill back with an inquiry as to whether it was intended. New Strength for Lame Backs and Worn-out Conditions

Dear Mr. Editor:
I suffered from lame back and a tired, worn-out feeling. Was unable to stand erect and scarcely able to get around. It would usually come on at first with crick in small of my back. I took Anuric Tablets and my back commenced to get better. I did not have to walk doubled over as I did before using the "Anuric." It is the best remedy I have ever taken for what it is intended to relieve.

Etiquette Above Hunger.
A wanderer in the wilderness and without food, the hapless city sportsman was found at last in an advanced stage of exhaustion. His rescuers propped him up against a tree trunk and offered him a cup of steaming broth. Feebly he waved them away.

A spasm, as of distress, passed over the city man's face.
"You—you are serving on the wrong side," he corrected in a whisper.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a true friend to women in times of trial and at times of pain when the organs are not performing their functions. War's Changes in Paris.
Before the war, no tobacco was too fine for the Parisienne. Egyptian, Turkish or Russian, was eagerly sought. Cigarettes with real gold tips were not enough. A rose petal was considered a more dainty mouthpiece. Now the cheapest tobacco is the fashion and in their sympathy with the men at the front women have taken to smoking "caporal," as their heroes do. The ivory cigarette holder may have a circle of pearls set in it, but the cigarette must be the same as "his."

"CASCARETS" FOR SLUGGISH BOWELS

No sick headache, sour stomach, biliousness or constipation by morning.

Get a 10-cent box now. Turn the rascals out—the headache, biliousness, indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out to-night and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach; remove the sour, fermenting food; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret to-night straightens you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver, and bowel action for months. Children love Cascarets because they never gripe or sicken. Adv.

Bumper Grain Crops

Good Markets—High Prices
Prizes Awarded to Western Canada for Wheat, Oats, Barley, Alfalfa and Grasses.

The winners of Western Canada at the Soil Products Exposition at Denver were easily made. The list comprised Wheat, Oats, Barley and Grasses, the most important being the prizes for Wheat and Oats and sweep stake on Alfalfa.

No less important than the splendid quality of Western Canada's wheat and other grains, is the excellence of the cattle fed and fattened on the grasses of that country. A recent shipment of cattle to Chicago topped the market in that city for quality and price.

Western Canada produced in 1915 one-third as much wheat as all of the United States, or over 300,000,000 bushels.

Canada in proportion to population has a greater exportable surplus of wheat this year than any country in the world, and at present prices you can figure out the revenue for the producer. In Western Canada you will find good markets, splendid schools, exceptional social conditions, perfect climate and other great attractions. There is no war tax on land and no conscription.

Send for illustrated pamphlet and ask for reduced railway rates, information as to best locations, etc. Address Superintendent Immigration, Ottawa, Canada.

WILSON IN THE RACE

CONSENT IS GIVEN BY CHIEF EXECUTIVE TO USE OF NAME IN THE OHIO PRIMARY.

MAKES KNOWN HIS POSITION

President Makes Formal Announcement of His Candidacy in a Letter Written to Comply With the Provisions of the Law.

Washington, Feb. 16.—President Wilson formally gave his consent on Monday that his name be used as a candidate for re-nomination. In a letter to the secretary of state of Ohio the president stated that he was unwilling to enter a contest for the re-nomination, but was ready to permit the use of his name in the coming primary in order that the Democrats of Ohio might make known their preference.

The president made known his position in order to comply with the Ohio primary law, which requires candidates for delegates to the party conventions to make known their first and second choices before February 25 and also requires that the candidates for delegates have the consent of their names. The president was formally notified of the requirements of the law last week and wrote Charles C. Hildebrandt, secretary of state of Ohio, as follows:

"I am enclosing to you a letter the occasion of which I dare say will be quite obvious. Friends in Ohio have called my attention to section 1951 of the general code of Ohio as amended in 1914 with regard to primary elections and have requested that I indicate my willingness to have my name used. I accordingly take the liberty of sending you the enclosed letter as formal permission under the statute."

The letter the president enclosed was as follows:

"While I am entirely unwilling to enter into any contest for the presidential nomination of the Democratic party, I am willing to permit the use of my name that the Democrats in Ohio may make known their preferences in regard to that nomination."

"In order, therefore, to satisfy the technical requirements of the statutes of the state of Ohio, I hereby consent to the use of my name as a candidate for the presidency by any candidate who seeks to be elected a delegate to the national Democratic convention."

GERMANY OUTBID U. S., PLEA

Berlin Government Offered Nicaragua Larger Sum for Canal Route Option, It Is Said.

Washington, Feb. 16.—That Germany had offered Nicaragua a larger sum than the United States for an option on the Nicaraguan canal route was urged in the senate on Monday as an argument for early ratification of the pending treaty.

Several senators said they had been informed during the course of the debate that Germany had long sought an option on the canal route; that efforts first were made soon after France undertook construction of a canal and had been renewed more recently. Members of the foreign relations committee denied reports that there was any documentary evidence in possession of the committee on the subject.

"Of course we have heard reports that Germany sought to obtain the Nicaraguan canal route," said Senator Stone, chairman of the committee. "Whether she offered $9,000,000 or $12,000,000, or $20,000,000, I do not know."

ACTRESS IS SHOT AS SPY

Hungarian Musical Star Slain in Budapest—Convicted of Luring Secrets From Officials.

Cleveland, Feb. 16.—Sari Petross, the beautiful Hungarian actress, has been shot in Budapest as an English spy.

This information was received via wireless by residents of Cleveland who were personally acquainted with the famous actress.

She was put to death almost immediately after the court-martial found her guilty of using her beauty to inveigle military secrets from high army officials and communicating them to the British war office by means of smuggled letters.

Her arrest, court-martial and execution were conducted with the utmost secrecy. She denied all charges, but was confronted by several of her letters, which were said to have been turned over to the authorities by a jealous officer. Then she broke down and confessed.

Miss Petross was the niece of Countess Ilka Kheszky.

FRENCH LOSE FIGHT

BERLIN ANNOUNCES GAIN OF SEVEN HUNDRED YARDS OF FOE'S POSITIONS.

CHAMPAGNE SCENE OF FIGHT

Fierce Battle Raging Along Entire Front in the West—Paris Says Five Attacks. Were Repulsed—British Lose in Flanders.

London, Feb. 16.—Furious fighting is general along the western front and particularly in the Champagne. The German war office announced the capture of 700 yards of French positions in Champagne, south of Saine Marie-a-Py. At this point 206 officers and men were taken prisoner.

The French official report does not mention the capture of these positions, but says five successive infantry attacks in an effort by the Germans to recapture positions recently taken in Champagne were repulsed. The statement admits the Germans penetrated a French trench near Soissons, but they subsequently were ejected. It added:

"The German report says: 'British artillery bombarded the town of Lille. Considerable material damage was done, but there was no loss of life or destruction of military property.'"

"In the fighting in the region northwest and west of Vimy up to February 9 we captured nine officers, 652 men, 35 machine guns, 2 mine throwers and stores of various descriptions. Our artillery shelled heavily the enemy's positions between the Oise and Helms with good success."

"Hand grenade battles continue without interruption over the portion of our trenches to the east of Maison de Champagne, which the French occupied February 11. Between the Mouse and the Moselle we destroyed by five large explosions the advanced trenches of the enemy over a front of 30 to 40 yards."

"Lively artillery fighting is proceeding in Lorraine and in the Vosges. South of Russel, east of St. Die, a German detachment penetrated advanced portions of the enemy's position and captured more than 30 chineurs."

"Our aeroplanes bombarded enemy positions and the railway establishments at La Panne and Poperinghe."

The French official statement also reports:

"To the north of Vie-Sur-Aisne our artillery dispersed enemy detachments which had advanced as far as our wire entanglements."

FRENCH CRUISER IS MISSING

Admiral Charner Has Not Been Heard From Since February 8—Torpedoed by Germans?

Paris, Feb. 16.—The following official statement was given out here on Sunday:

"The ministry of marine fears for the fate of the cruiser Admiral Charner, which has been patrolling the Syrian coast. No news has been received from the cruiser since February 8, when, according to a German telegram, a submarine sank a French warship."

The Admiral Charner under normal conditions carried a crew of 370. It displaced 4,680 tons.

London, Feb. 16.—The British steamship Springwell of 5,513 tons gross has been torpedoed and sunk in the Mediterranean. The officers and crew were saved. The British steamship Cedarwood has been sunk.

Havre, Feb. 14.—A Belgian official report issued states that the German gunboat Hedwig von Wissmann has been sunk in Lake Tanganyika. Two officers and nineteen sailors were made prisoners. The Belgian and British flotillas engaged suffered no loss.

GRAHAME-WHITE IS WOUNDED

Noted Flyer Was Commissioned a Lieutenant in the British Army Last Month.

Hazebrouck, France, Feb. 15.—Claude Grahame-White, the British aviator, has been wounded gravely. No details have been obtained. He was commissioned a lieutenant last month.

Lieutenant Grahame-White, one of the best known aviators, won international prominence several years ago by his spectacular flights in England and America. He was victor in many flying contests in the United States and was awarded thousands of dollars in prizes.

Lieutenant Grahame-White's wife, formerly Miss Dorothy Taylor of New York, obtained last month a decree for the restitution of her conjugal rights, an action which in England is a preliminary step to a suit for divorce.

Newport News, Va., Feb. 14.—President Wilson visited Fortress Monroe and inspected the great guns that guard the entrance to Chesapeake bay. Accompanied by Mrs. Wilson, he landed from the naval yacht Mayflower.

Prince to Wed on March 11.

London, Feb. 15.—A dispatch to the London Telegraph company from Amsterdam says Emperor William has announced his decision that the marriage of Prince Joachim is to take place at Potsdam on March 11.

ACTIVITIES ON THE WEST FRONT

German attacks west and southwest of Vimy, in the Artois region, resulted in the capture of 800 yards of French first-line trenches. Paris says some of the positions were retaken later. The Artois region may be the scene of a new German offensive on a large scale. It is known that there have been many new German troops rushed to Flanders and northern France recently.

TO SINK ARMED SHIPS HITS AT L. D. BRANDEIS

VESSELS WITH GUNS WILL BE DESTROYED BY GERMANS.

Alleges Given Time to Signify Intention Towards United States Disarmament Proposition.

Washington, Feb. 12.—Germany and Austria have notified the state department that after March 1 they will consider all armed merchantmen as warships and sink them without warning.

Count von Bernstorff, German ambassador, first delivered the notice to the state department two days ago. It was learned.

Baron Erich Ziwilneck, Austrian charge, has notified Secretary Lansing that Austria concurred in Germany's stand.

March 1 was fixed for the date for the order to become effective to give the entire allies time to signify their intention toward the recent note of the United States proposing the disarmament of all merchantmen.

The United States recently proposed to all the belligerents that the development of submarine warfare had made it desirable for all to agree that merchant ships should be absolutely unarmed, disarming even the small caliber guns which they have heretofore been permitted to carry for defense.

The memorandum went forward by mail about two weeks ago, and no replies were expected inside of six weeks. The proposal was based on the theory that no merchant ships of the Germanic powers and none of their commerce destroyers, except submarines, were at sea.

VIENNA IS ASKED TO EXPLAIN

American Tank Steamer Petrolite Was Fired Upon and Food Taken by Submarine.

Washington, Feb. 12.—Secretary Lansing announced on Thursday that he had sent to the Austro-Hungarian government through Ambassador Penfield a dispatch asking for an investigation and an explanation of the attack by an Austrian submarine on the American tank steamer Petrolite.

The secretary's dispatch called attention to affidavits from members of the crew of the Petrolite and to information from other sources to the effect that the ship was stopped in the Mediterranean near Alexandria by an Austrian submarine, which fired upon it and wounded one man who was in the engine room. The submarine commander asked for food, which Captain Thompson of the Petrolite refused. A boarding party was then sent to the American ship and one American member of her crew removed. He was held as hostage while the Austrians took the food they required from the Petrolite's stores.

Czar Goes to Front.

London, Feb. 12.—A Petrograd dispatch to Reuters says Emperor Nicholas has left there for the front.

Captor of John Dietz Dies.

Milwaukee, Feb. 15.—Fred Thompson, former deputy sheriff, who captured Dietz, "defender of Cameron dam," and who once was wealthy, is dead in Montana, a pauper, according to dispatches from there.

$300,000 Fire at Cornell.

CLIFFORD THORNE OF IOWA MAKES GRAVE CHARGES.

Declares President's Candidate for Supreme Court Justice Guilty of Infidelity.

Washington, Feb. 11.—Grave charges against Louis D. Brandeis, nominated by President Wilson as Supreme court justice, were made on Wednesday in a public hearing before a subcommittee. Clifford Thorne, chairman of the Iowa railroad commission, caused a sensation when he deliberately told the committee that he believed the president's candidate guilty of:

1. Intidelity, breach of faith and unprofessional conduct in connection with one of the greatest cases of this generation.

2. Committing himself as counsel for the interstate commerce commission to the proposition that a return of 7 1/2 per cent on railroad capital is not adequate, although the commission itself had fixed that rate as an adequate profit.

The charges, delivered in a calm, deliberate tone, took away the breath of the solemn senate subcommittee and made the crowd in detail the conduct of himself and Mr. Brandeis in the railroad rate case of 1910 and 1913 before the interstate commerce commission. He sought to show that Mr. Brandeis, after acting for the shippers in 1910, had become attorney for the commission in 1913 and had not acted in good faith. The object of his testimony was to show that the conduct of Brandeis was unbecoming a lawyer of "judicial temperament," and that on railroad questions the Supreme court candidate was already committed and would not be able to act judicially if such questions came before him as a judge of the highest court.

U. S. NOTE TO POWERS DENIES RIGHT TO ARM LINERS FOR DEFENSE.

GERMAN EDICT IS APPROVED

Americans May Be Warned Not to Travel on Belligerent Ships Which Carry Guns for Protection Against Submarine Attacks.

Washington, Feb. 14.—The declaration by the central powers of their purpose after March 1 next to regard armed merchant ships as warships and sink them on sight is in exact accordance with the new policy of the United States as laid down by the American note of January 18.

It is expected President Wilson now will give instructions to all port officials directing them to consider armed merchantmen as auxiliary cruisers and to apply to them the rules under which such vessels must depart within twenty-four hours after arrival or after necessary repairs are made or stores taken on board.

It is expected further that warnings will be issued directing Americans not to travel on belligerent armed merchant ships.

The note, by direction of the secretary of state to American ambassadors, was addressed to the European belligerents in connection with the recognition of submarines as commerce destroyers and the desirability of the disarmament of belligerent merchantmen.

Its text in part is as follows:

"It is a matter of the deepest interest to my government to bring to an end, if possible, the dangers of life which attend the use of submarines as at present employed in destroying enemy commerce on the high seas, since on any merchant vessel of belligerent nationality there may be citizens of the United States who have taken passage or members of the crew in the exercise of their recognized rights as neutrals."

"While I am fully alive to the appalling loss of life among noncombatants, regardless of age or sex, which has resulted from the present method of destroying merchant vessels without removing the persons on board to places of safety and while I view that as contrary to those humane principles which should control belligerents in the conduct of their naval operations, I do not feel that a belligerent should be deprived of the proper use of submarines in the invasion of commerce, since those instruments of war have proved their effectiveness in this practical branch of warfare on the high seas."

"Your government will understand that in seeking a formula or rule I approach it of necessity from the point of view of a neutral, but I believe that it will be equally efficacious in preserving the lives of noncombatants on merchant vessels of belligerent nationalities."

"My comments on this subject are predicated on the following propositions:

"1. A noncombatant has a right to traverse the high seas in a merchant vessel entitled to fly a belligerent flag, to rely upon the observance of the rules of international law and principles of humanity, and if the vessel is approached by a naval vessel of another belligerent the merchant vessel of enemy nationality should not be attacked without being ordered to stop."

"2. An enemy merchant vessel when ordered to do so by a belligerent submarine should immediately stop."

"3. Such vessel should not be attacked after being ordered to stop unless it attempts to flee or resist, in case it ceases to flee or resist, the attack should be discontinued."

"4. In the event that it is impossible to place a prize crew on board of an enemy merchant vessel, or to convey it into port, the vessel may be sunk, provided the crew and passengers have been removed to a place of safety."

"It would therefore appear to be a reasonable and reciprocally just arrangement if it could be agreed by the opposing belligerents that submarines should be caused to adhere strictly to the rules of international law in the matter of stopping and searching merchant vessels, determining their belligerent nationality and removing the crews and passengers to places of safety before sinking the vessels as prizes of war, and that merchant vessels of belligerent nationality should be prohibited from carrying any armament whatsoever."

"I should add that my government is impressed with the reasonableness of the argument that a merchant vessel carrying an armament of any sort should be held to be a neutral as well as so treated by a belligerent government and is seriously considering instructing its officials accordingly."

Spirit of Washington WITH US TODAY

AND again, as the anniversary of his birthday rolls around, we contemplate the life and accomplishments of our nation's father. The United States of America is now in the midst of a great crisis—one of three. The first was the desperate struggle of the baby republic to maintain life between 1770 and 1816. The second was the terrible fever which rattled the bones of the half-grown nation from 1861 to 1865. The third is different. The hungry, blood-mad wolves of war are snarling all about us. We are charged with the problem of taking means of defense against the time when they may turn from their ear-cesses to attack us. We must insure for ourselves prosperity. For the good of the whole we must assume the task of harmonizing all the multitude of discordant and misunderstanding groups of people that compose our body politic—men and women of a great variety of racial antecedents, of political tenets, of religious beliefs, of capital and labor, of education and ignorance—and weld them into one great patriotic mass. We must keep friendship with our neighbors to North and South and across the seas.

So in this time of stress it behooves us to keep our national temper and deal fairly and mean what we say. It is well worth while to consider the historian Lecky's description of George Washington:

"In the despondency of long continued failure, in the elation of sudden success, at times when his soldiers were deserting by hundreds, and when malignant plots were formed against his reputation, amid the constant quarrels, rivalries, and jealousies of his subordinates, in the dark hour of national ingratitude, and in the midst of the most universal and intoxicating flattery, Washington was always the same calm, wise, just and single-minded man, pursuing the course which he believed to be right without fear or favor or fanaticism; equally free from the passions that spring from interest and from the passions that spring from imagination."

"He never acted on the impulse of an absorbing or uncalculating enthusiasm, and he valued very highly fortune, position, and reputation; but at the command of duty he was ready to risk and sacrifice them all."

"It was, in the highest sense of the word, a gentleman and a man of honor, and he carried into public life the standard of private morals."

"It was at first the constant dread of large sections of the American people that if the old government were overthrown they would fall into the hands of military adventurers and undergo the yoke of military despotism. It was mainly the transparent integrity of the character of Washington that dispelled the fear."

There has rarely been a time when the people had more need of the lessons of Washington's life than now. We are in the midst of the uncertainties visited upon us, as a people at peace, by a conflagration which has enveloped a continent in war. In a year of peace, of sowing and reaping, of the productive activities of market and factory, we suddenly found ourselves face to face with the peril of such a panic as the world had never witnessed. Industry withered as under a blight; trade dried up at the roots; our chief export crop lost for a time two-thirds of its value; specie payments were suspended in our financial centers, instead of having heavy trade balances in our favor, we were called upon for gold by the ton to pay for securities sent back to us by foreign investors. Want and destitution appeared where there had been plenty. We have come far since those black days, but a dangerous road still stretches before us. Let us remember Washington, the commander in chief in one battle.

That was Yorktown. Washington took the command of the armies of the colonies in July, 1775. He received the surrender of Cornwallis in October, 1781, more than six years later. These six years were spent in avoiding battle. There was one brilliant battle—the battle of Trenton. But the history of his campaigns is the history of skillful retreats, like that which followed Trenton, rear-guard actions, defensive fights when attacked, disastrous offensive movements like that at Germantown.

He had no government behind him, only a loose confederation of colonies, which refused to pay their levies and left him at one time with a discouraged remnant of only 3,000 soldiers. He avoided battle with the British; he used the arts of the Indian fighter and slipped out of the very jaws of disaster; he moved from place to place. But he could not evade hunger, cold, nakedness, dissension, discouragement. These met him in frontal

To bring men to be well acquainted with the duties of a soldier requires time. To bring them under proper discipline and subordination not only requires time but is a work of great difficulty and in this country, where there is so little distinction between the officers and soldiers, requires an uncommon degree of attention. To expect the same service from raw and undisciplined recruits as from the veteran soldiers is to expect what never did and perhaps never will happen.—Washington.

attack. The siege of Yorktown was a splendid thing—but the real test came at Valley Forge. When at last the hour came to fight, fighting was easy by comparison with the waiting that had preceded it.

On July 2, 1775, General Washington arrived at Cambridge, Mass., accompanied by Major General Lee, his next in command, and other officers, and established headquarters in the mansion subsequently occupied by Longfellow. About nine o'clock on the morning of the following day, attended by a suitable escort, he proceeded from his headquarters to a great elm tree near Harvard college. Here the Continental forces were drawn up in military order. Under the shadow of the tree Washington drew his sword as commander in chief of the American army, declaring that it should never be sheathed until the liberties of his country were established.

Finally the day came for Washington to take leave of his army—October 13, 1783. For the last time he assembled them at Newburgh, N. Y., where he rode out on the field and gave them one of those paternal addresses which so eminently characterized his relationship with his army.

But his final leave of everything connected with his military life was taken on December 3, 1783, at Faunce's tavern, New York city. Here he had requested his officers in full uniform to assemble. On entering the room and finding himself surrounded by his old companions in arms his agitated feelings overcame his usual self-control. Every man arose with eyes turned toward him. Filling a glass of wine and lifting it to his lips, he rested his benignant but saddened countenance upon them and said:

"With a heart full of love and gratitude, I now take leave of you. I most devoutly wish that your latter days may be as prosperous as your former ones have been honorable and glorious."

"I cannot come to each of you and take my leave, but you shall be obliged to you if each of you will come and take me by the hand."

A profound silence followed as the officers gazed at the countenance of their leader, while the eyes of all were wet with tears. He then expressed again his desire that each of them should come and take his hand.

One after another followed, receiving and returning the affectionate adieu of their commander, after which he left the room in silence, followed by his officers in procession to embark in the barge that was to convey him to Paulus Hook, now Jersey City.

As he was passing through the light infantry, drawn up on either side to receive him, an old soldier who was by his side on the terrible night of his march to Trenton, stepped out of the ranks and reached out his arms, exclaiming: "Farewell, my dear general, farewell!" Washington seized his hand most heartily, when the soldier forgot all discipline, rushed toward their chief and bathed him with his tears. The scene was like that of a good patriarch taking leave of his children and going on a long journey, when he might return no more.

Having entered the barge, he turned to the weeping company upon the wharf and, waving his hat, bade them a silent adieu. They stood with heads uncovered until the barge was hidden from their view, when, in silent and solemn procession, they retraced to the place where they had assembled.

Napoleon Bonaparte said: "Posterity will talk of Washington with reverence, as the founder of a great empire, when my name shall be lost to the vortex of revolution."

Like so many other of the prophecies of the great Napoleon, its truth is becoming more and more apparent every day. A little more than 116 years ago, Washington died at Mount Vernon at the age of sixty-eight, after an illness of only 24 hours, in 1799.

BIG ANARCHIST PLOT UNEARTHED

Churches, Public Institutions and Clergy Objects of Wide Conspiracy.

CRIME HOLOCAUST PLANNED

Gigantic Conspiracy Is Disclosed by Arrest of an Italian Held as Accomplice in Poisoned Soup Conspiracy.

Chicago, Feb. 15.—An anarchistic plot that proposed a veritable holocaust among churches, public institutions and the clergy of the United States was disclosed by the Chicago police.

Among the effects of John Allegrini, anarchist confidant of Jean Cronies, alleged poisoner of Archbishop Mundelein's banquet soup, were found letters that planned crimes that reduce the wildest dreams of a Borgia and make the poisoning of a hundred banquet guests a mere detail.

Fifty Churches Fied.
Already, according to Deputy Chief Schuetzler, incendiary fires, some destructive and some less successful, have attacked more than fifty churches in Chicago alone.

The existence of an anti-clerical organization of "destroyers" is regarded as certain by Chief Henley, Capt. Nicholas Hunt of the detective bureau, and Deputy Schuetzler, who last night completed the study of translations of Allegrini's letters.

Allegrini has been formally arrested and charged with conspiracy to commit murder. Previous to his formal detention he was held in close confinement after being taken into custody on Saturday.

Fifteen Rule Plotters.
Allegrini and Cronies were members of a committee of fifteen who are directors of the tremendous conspiracy.

Plans and specifications indicated huge Chicago buildings were marked for early destruction.

Big Buildings Doomed.
The Peoples Gas Light and Coke company building at Michigan avenue and Adams street, Captain Hunt believes from the documentary evidence, would have been an object of destruction but for the discovery of the plot.

One ground plan found among the Cronies-Allegrini papers included a sketch of the Union League club, the federal building, and the Grace hotel. The attempt to wreck St. Patrick's Roman Catholic church in New York city recently is believed by Captain Hunt to be a part of the gigantic plot.

Rome Fountain Head.
Detective Sergeant Paul Riccio, who made translations of the briefing letters, deduced that certain of the ring-leaders in the international conspiracy have headquarters in Rome, in the very shadow of the Vatican.

But some of the carefully worded sentences indicated that Rome, because of the extreme caution of the Vatican guard, was not well suited to the purposes of the plotters. For this reason America was chosen.

Bombs for Police.
Several of the letters are extremely detailed in their references to engines of destruction. While there are explosives suited to the demolition of whole buildings, there are others designed for more particular work.

For instance, there are small bombs for the murder of policemen and ones of larger caliber for the killing of crowds.

For a Church Crowd.
One bomb in particular is recommended for its integrity when thrown into a throng of religious people leaving church. It is suggested that it be thrown into their midst when they are walking away from church and discussing the sermon.

The picture of mangled bodies, bleeding forms and the sound of death cries seemed to present a pleasing affect to the writer.

The writer explained that another form of bomb was suitable for throwing at a policeman. It would tear him to pieces and the thrower might walk on, smoking his cigar and in utter indifference of the shock he had produced.

TRUNK REVEALS MURDER MYSTERY

Workmen's Pick Uncovers Hidden Crime More Than a Year Old.

BURIED IN QUICKLIME

With Identification of Body as That of Man Missing Many Months, Former Employee Is Placed Under Arrest.

Philadelphia.—A workman who drove his pick into a wooden box buried in the cellar of an old building that was being razed in this city, uncovered a hidden mystery. The box was carried out and broken open. In it was a brass-bound trunk and in the trunk was the body of a man partly destroyed by quicklime. The body had also been covered with strips of leather, which had been soaked in acid to hasten the work of decay and destruction.

Within a short time the police of the city had established the identity of the murdered man. From the teeth, a partly destroyed notebook and a few remnants of clothing, the body was recognized as that of Daniel J. McNichol, aged 26, who had disappeared from his home on March 30, 1914. McNichol was in the leather business and had for his foreman Edward J. Kelley, who, after the failure of the leather concern, opened a laundry in the building under which the body of McNichol was found.

Quarrel Led to Killing.
There had been financial transactions between McNichol and Kelley and it is the theory of the detectives that the men quarreled in the office of the leather company on March 30, and that Kelley struck down his employer, placed his body in the trunk and took the latter in his wagon to the building where the laundry was opened up the next day. About the time of McNichol's disappearance, Kelley was seen at work excavating a hole in the cellar of his new place of business. He said he was digging a place for a furnace.

Following the discovery of the body, Kelley read in a paper that he was wanted, and, after consulting his wife, telephoned to the police that he was willful to submit to arrest. After he had been questioned he was held as a suspect, but subsequent developments resulted in a formal charge of murder being lodged against him. Kelley declares he is innocent and says McNichol is alive and that he had met him a number of times since his disappearance.

BOYS FORM THIEVES' CLUB

Two Members of the "Terrible Fifty-Eight" Arrested by the Police in Orange.

Orange, N. J.—The arrest of two lads, nine and ten years old, in this city brought to light the existence in West Orange of a club of small boys banded together as the "Crooks' Athletic Club," or the "Terrible Fifty-Eight." The object of the club, as ascertained by Police Chief John Drabell, is to promote petty thieving among its members.

George Durr, of 2 Orange place, West Orange, and John McNerney of Elm street, that town, were paroled to appear before the Juvenile court on a charge of larceny. They were arrested for shoplifting in Henry F. Schmidt's store at 200 Main street in this city. They had taken pen knives, cigarettes, flashlights and other loot.

Fined for Sleeping in Station.
Boston.—George S. White, of no place in particular except the North station in Boston, was recently fined $10 by Judge Burke in municipal court. White admitted he had slept in the station while standing erect and that his position caused a great crowd to collect.

WHEN KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE GLASS OF SALTS

Eat Less Meat If Kidneys Hurt or You Have Backache or Bladder Misery —Meat Forms Uric Acid.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver troubles, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now then to keep the kidneys pure, thereby eradicating kidney complications.

CITIES CLAIM FAMOUS

Honor of Originating Gastronomic Delicacies Has Been Pretty Well Established in This Country.

America has no national dish or delicacy, but we distinguish among our cities, according to gastronomic standards, each city or state maintaining an attitude of superiority over all the rest. Philadelphia has its scrapple, Boston its baked beans and brown bread. Boston makes other claims. It is said that swordfish is so precious in Boston that its sale to the rest of the country is forbidden. Boston also contributes to the contest the Parker house roll. Sandwich, O., claims to have furnished at least the name of portershouse steak. Charles Dickens, according to the story, was the principal figure in the christening. When Dickens visited the United States in the '60s he spent several days at the hotel, which at that time was conducted by a man named Porter and was known as the Porter house. The author, for his first meal, ordered a steak, and it was put up for him in such style by Mrs. Porter, the landlord's wife, that it struck his fancy. Porterhouse steak was Dickens' favorite dish while he remained in Sandwich. On the way back to New York Dickens spoke frequently of his portershouse steaks. Friends and acquaintances happening this way stopped at the Porter house and ate steaks. In due time chefs from several of the leading eastern hotels journeyed to the Porter house and from Mrs. Porter secured, for the mere asking, desired information concerning the manner in which she prepared the steaks. In this way the portershouse steak came into existence—so the story goes.

A large portion of what the world calls good luck is composed of ninety-nine parts of ambition and one part of talent.

Too many men pay for things they are too lazy to work for.

A GOOD CHANGE.

A Change of Food Works Wonders.

Wrong food and drink cause a lot of trouble in this world. To change is first aid when a person is ill, particularly from stomach and nervous troubles. As an illustration: A lady in Mo. was brought around to health again by leaving off coffee and some articles of food that did not agree with her.

She says: "For a number of years I suffered with stomach and bowel trouble which kept getting worse until I was ill most of the time. About four years ago I left off coffee and began using Postum. My stomach and bowels improved right along, but I was so reduced in flesh and so nervous that the least thing would overcome me."

"Then I changed my food and began using Orapo-Nuts in addition to Postum. I lived on these two principally for about four months. Day by day I gained in flesh and strength until the nervous trouble had disappeared. I feel that I owe my health to Postum and Orapo-Nuts."

"Husband was troubled, for a long time, with occasional cramps, and slept badly. Finally I prevailed upon him to leave off coffee and take Postum. After he tried Postum for a few days he found that he could sleep and that his cramps disappeared. He never went back to coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Postum comes in two forms: Postum Cereal—the original form—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—a soluble powder—dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water, and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

Both kinds are equally delicious and cost about the same per cup. "There's a Reason" for Postum.
